

The US is already behind many industrial nations in broadband access. It is essential for individuals to have a choice to promote healthy growth of this very important infrastructure. If the poor service and high inflated price of Comcast cable is an example of things to come in broadband, then I am afraid that this country will loose it's technical edge. In such difficult times, please at least give us control over our IP service providers. America is about choice and we need something better.